

SAVE THE DATE

Tuesday September 1st, 2020

Perspectives for obesity prevention and control in México and Latin American countries in the midst of COVID-19.

We aim to present various perspectives about these challenges and identify priority areas to improve obesity prevention and control in México and Latin America.

Coordinator:

DR. SIMÓN BARQUERA

Director, Nutrition and Health Research
Center, National Institute of Public Health, México.

Tuesday September 1st, 2020

Central European Time (CET): 16 - 17:15 pm Room 2

Central México Time (CMT): 10 - 11:15 am Room 2

Language: English

Perspectives for obesity prevention and control in México and Latin American countries in the midst of COVID-19.

Coordinator: Dr. Simón Barquera

Director, Nutrition and Health Research Center,
National Institute of Public Health, México.

DR. EDGAR DENOVA. Mexican National Institute of Public Health.

- The association between obesity, type 2 diabetes, hypertension and severe COVID-19 among Mexicans.

DR. OTILIA PERICHART. National Institute of Perinatology, México.

- Early nutrition interventions for the prevention of obesity and metabolic diseases.

PROF. DONNA RYAN. Pennington Biomedical Research Center.

- Primary healthcare response to obesity in Latin America: Recommendations from international experiences.

DR. HÉCTOR ESQUIVIAS. National Institute of Psychiatry, México.

- Stigma and obesity: A perspective on how to position this challenge in the Latin American public health agenda.

Tuesday September 1st, 2020

Central European Time (CET): 16 - 17:15 pm Room 2

Central México Time (CMT): 10 - 11:15 am Room 2

Language: English

Salud Metabólica